Playlist 1: Guidance for WIOA Programs, Service Providers, and Practitioners Working with Individuals with Disabilities

The Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act (WIOA) increases access for individuals with disabilities to high quality workforce services including preparation for competitive integrated employment. The purpose of this playlist is to provide WIOA service providers with information specifically about disabilities. This information, presented in five parts, can be helpful in creating partnerships that build on individuals’ talents and also strengthen or accommodate areas of need.

I. How Disabilities Are Legally Defined

There is no single definition of disability across federal programs. Below are two widely applicable definitions, but know that the definition may differ for specific programs.

Documents and Web Pages

- ADA Amendments Act of 2008—In 2008, Congress amended the definition of disability in the Americans with Disability Act (ADA, as amended ADAAA) to cover more people and, as a result, prevent more discrimination. The intent is that employers and service providers should no longer be focusing as much on who has a disability but, instead, focusing on making accommodations and avoiding discrimination. This resource provides guidance on interpreting how the ADAAA defines who can be identified as having a disability.

- Categories of Disability Under IDEA—This web page identifies how the nation’s special education law (called the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, or IDEA) defines children with disabilities who are enrolled in a school system. The definition includes specific disability terms. Links to each type of disability provide more detailed information.

- Basic Etiquette: People with Mental Illness—This web page provides guidance on interacting with individuals with mental illness/psychiatric disabilities.

III. Customer-Centered Design (CCD)

Customer-centered design is a methodology used by design firms, companies across the globe, and increasingly, government and non-profit organizations. It is a human-centered approach, and its “design thinking” can help organizations re-imagine service delivery on anything from better serving disconnected youth to improving business services.

IV. Resource Sharing Resources

Documents and Web Pages

- Integrated Resource Team (IRT) Information and Resources— The IRT approach involves diversified service systems coordinating services and leveraging funding in order to meet the needs of an individual job seeker with a disability. IRTs provide the opportunity for comprehensive wrap-around services on behalf of an individual with a disability or other challenges to employment by bringing together diverse programs and services that meet the needs of a particular job seeker. This strategic approach is customer-centered and supports the integrated nature of WIOA.

V. Adult Education

Documents and Web Pages

- Improving Adult Literacy Instruction: Options for Practice and Research—Chapter 7: Learning, Reading and Writing Disabilities of this report has four parts. Part one begins with a brief overview of learning disabilities and then focuses on reading disabilities, followed by challenges faced by individuals with writing disabilities. Part two presents neurocognitive research on the development of brain structures and functions associated with reading disabilities with implications for adult literacy assessment and instruction. Part three describes accommodations to facilitate learning for those with learning disabilities. The chapter concludes with a summary and discussion of research needed to design effective instruction and instructional supports for low-literate adolescents and adults with disabilities who need to further develop their reading and writing skills. This chapter is relevant to college instructors as well as adult basic and secondary education program instructors (pages 179–203).

- Learning to Achieve: A Professional’s Guide to Educating Adults with Learning Disabilities—This six-chapter guide provides information on instructional strategies and resources for teachers working with older adolescents and adults with learning disabilities and related issues that make school learning challenging. This is a companion document for the Learning to Achieve online courses.
